Education and training for freedom

Senator Giovanni Bersani founded CEFA in 1972, based on a European vision rooted in cooperative principles, thus identifying two operational areas for our NGO: training and agriculture. The theme of education is more relevant than ever, since not only the idea of Europe, which has accompanied us until today, seems to be in crisis, but also the idea of cooperation and solidarity between people. Based on CEFA's guiding principles, men should learn to interact valuing different cultures. With a listening attitude and solidarity, CEFA operates and proposes to be evaluated once again this year through its social annual report. To achieve the objectives of international cooperation and development, which always seem to us insufficient compared to the needs, education and training remain fundamental for CEFA. To educate today means to provide keys to understand history, our own and that of others, in which individuals and communities are protagonists within an integral ecological vision that embraces mankind and the planet. To train, be they farmers in Somalia or women livestock keepers in Mozambique, means today, as when CEFA was founded, to make people autonomous and free; members of a new society able to educate, so that freedom can prevail for every person.

Raoul Mosconi, President of CEFA

More activities, more people supported

The financial report's figures tell us that 2018 was a challenging year. We have gone from a volume of activities equal to € 4,500,000 in 2017 to almost € 6,000,000 in 2018. Figures that mean we've had the opportunity to meet and help thousands more people, with whom we have built together a change with the common goal of fighting poverty and the lack of fundamental rights.

Among the many projects implemented in 2018, I want to mention the project "Employ" with which we have trained 47,900 Ethiopian smallholders through a "cascade" training system. The project trained the district agricultural extensionists who in return trained the village agricultural extensionists, who were then in charge of training the farmers. On what? On basic agricultural techniques that, when applied, improve the quantity and quality of agricultural productions. We feared that something could be lost along the various steps. We were satisfied instead of how the know-how acquired during the technical trainings was immediately put into practice with good results. Despite 47 years of experience, once again, Africa surprises us and makes us understand, how people don't want assistance, but ask for tools, one of which is training, to build oneself's future based on the dignity of their work.

In 2018 we also continued to operate in Libya with projects helping both Libyans and migrants waiting to seek refuge in Europe. The European Union must change its policies if it does not want to be an accomplice of the inhuman facts happening there. In the hope that this will happen, we intervened by distributing essential goods for the basic necessities of those held in the detention centres run by the UN-recognised Libyan government. The implementation of this intervention was not without difficulties, but as long as political conditions do not change, we cannot remain spectators of this tragedy.

It has been a year in which everything we have managed to accomplish was the result of a joint effort. First of all, of our expatriate staff on the field. In 2018 they were 39, operating along side our local staff, for a total of 171 people. A highly skilled group that shares our values and guarantees our operativeness despite all the difficulties they may encounter. We cannot forget our volunteers: the Board of Directors; those who helped realize the events in the squares of Bologna and Milan; so as many others. And finally our donors: we have done all we could to use everyone's contribution in the most effective way, improving the lives of more than 220,000 people. Thanks to the commitment of all, we were able to allocate almost 90% of the donations directly to projects. Thank you!

Paolo Chesani, Director of CEFA

Methodological note

The intent of this report is to provide both an economic-financial and a social insight of the projects supported by CEFA in Italy and abroad. The report highlights the activities carried out and the results achieved in continuity and consistency with the mission of the non-profit organization. In preparing the 2018 social annual report, we have followed the guidelines for the drafting of social annual reports destined to Third Sector entities, in compliance with art.14, paragraph 1 of the Legislative Decree 117/2017 and, with reference to social enterprises, with art. 9 paragraph 2 of Legislative Decree 112/2017. An exception was made with regard to the items "monitoring" and "deposit", as to date the indications on monitoring are missing and there is no national register for the "deposit". The need to adapt the Social Annual Report to the abovementioned guidelines is intended to be a valuable opportunity to improve and increase CEFA's culture of transparency towards its internal and external stakeholders - activists, members, partners and institutions.

In general, the 2018 Social Annual Report confirmed the methodological structure of the previous years. The focus has been on training, supported by our non-profit organization in the various projects that have seen it involved, as a tool through which to achieve a greater awareness of its own abilities, potentials and opportunities.

The focus on human rights was developed by analyzing issues concerning above all the struggle against poverty, gender inequality, social exclusion and radicalism. Special attention was then dedicated to child protection and migration.

The projects have been organized by country and can be divided into three categories: projects in developing countries, among which figure also emergency interventions in Libya, and projects in Italy on global citizenship education. In the description of the projects, for those still in progress the focus is on their objectives, while for those already concluded, besides the objectives the report specifies the results achieved. To underline their added value, per each country the presentation of a project includes an interview to one of the beneficiaries.

The fundraising figures refer to the amounts obtained through the activities of the communication and fundraising office. Other private funds contribute to the co-financing of CEFA's project activities.

Mission

CEFA - The Seed of Solidarity has been working for over 45 years to overcome hunger and poverty. It helps the world's poorest communities in achieving food self-sufficiency and in ensuring the respect of their fundamental rights (education, work, gender equality, child protection). CEFA's goal is to create models of sustainable development, able to ensure the growth of a territory, increased levels of well-being and a higher degree of resilience to climate change, encouraging local communities to become the protagonists of their own development.

Vision

CEFA's wish is that every person, in every part of the world, becomes a protagonist of development, so to be an active subject of democracy and peace.

Valori

1. Sustainability

Is the ability to implement initiatives for the development of a territory: its purpose is to promote the capacity of local communities to take responsibility of project activities, so that they can continue and thrive, even once the presence of CEFA's personnel in the country ends.

2. Empowerment

Is the ability of the poorest communities to self-support themselves through projects focusing on agricultural training, craftsmanship, energy access, marketing capacities on local and international markets. CEFA believes that work is one of the most important dimensions of a human being. Through work also people can also contribute to the creation: they use existing resources to support themselves and their families.

3. Transparency

CEFA is not satisfied to just prepare the Social Annual Report and have it audited: CEFA presents it at Palazzo D'Accursio, the historic seat of the Municipality of Bologna. It is an appointment open to all those who wish to learn more about how funds are used, the past activities and the future programmes. The financial statement is published also on CEFA's website. Moreover, offices are open and ready to welcome all those who are interested to learn more about the work carried out. Every year we offer a flight ticket as a prize to visit CEFA's activities and projects in the world and become an eyewitness for all.

4. Sobriet

Sobriety is more than a managerial attitude, it represents our style of activity: sobriety and efficiency in the use and management of financial resources that the local, national and International community entrust to CEFA. We use approximately 10% of our funds in management activities in Italy, allocating most of the resources to development projects.

5. Solidarity

Solidarity is a profound ratio for CEFA. It is the "common recognition in so far as one recognises to be part of a common "we" well defined (...) to which is added the solidarity as reciprocity, understood as willingness to exchange, to interact: this reciprocity is made vital by a fundamental dimension, trust (...) which is a fragile and relatively rare capital." (De Sadre, 2007). Solidarity in feeling the problem of the other on oneself and putting oneself to his side with loyalty and competence, without replacing him.

Since the beginning for the well-being of all

1972

The senator and member of the European Parliament Giovanni Bersani, skillful builder of humanity and peace, founded CEFA ONLUS with the purpose of transferring training and skills to the most poor populations of the South of the world, so that they could become the agents of their own development.

1973 > 1974

Following a meeting between Giovanni Bersani and the President of Tanzania Julius Nyerere, CEFA started intervening in this country. In the region of Iringa the first project of integrated rural development was launched with the purpose that the territory, its population and the institutions would learn how to act together for the sake of all.

1975 > 1980

Attention is given to the region of East Africa, especially Tanzania and Kenya, with the strategic goal of promoting the responsible participation of local communities. Activities start with agricultural development projects to give new work opportunities to the population.

1992

Following the tragic events in Africa and in the Balkans, CEFA intervenes in Somalia, Albania and in the territories of former Yugoslavia (Bosnia Herzegovina) through agricultural development projects meant to provide work opportunities to local communities.

1998

The intervention of CEFA in the Mediterranean region starts with the first agro-livestock and social project in Morocco, in the area of Settat, in the center of the country, where most of Moroccans migrants come from.

2000 > 2001

At the beginning of the new millennium the first projects with the Mayan populations of Quiché, Guatemala, are launched. Girls receive scholarships with which they are granted access to school, providing them an alternative to being relegated at home to carry out domestic chores. In this way they learn to emancipate themselves.

2005 > 2007

In 2005, the first projects related to justice aiming to protect the human rights of prisoners are launched in Kenya. In 2007, instead, the Njombe milk factory is inaugurated in Tanzania, in the South of the country, an important project in the dairy sector involving the schools of the district.

2010 > 2011

Following the outbreak of the Arab Spring protests and with the intensification of the crisis in the Mediterranean area, CEFA starts intervening in Tunisia. With the REMIDA 2 project, CEFA supports the assisted voluntary repatriation of those who have no longer a legal situation in Italy.

2014 > 2015

In 2014 in Tunisia CEFA starts "Mare Nostrum: work, Mediterranean and migrations for a new social growth". Here the local counterpart is strengthened as an actor of the civil society. In 2015 the "Africa Milk Project" in Tanzania is awarded at the EXPO MILANO 2015 as a world-wide BEST PRATICE.

2016

Through the intervention in Ethiopia, a country devastated by famine and drought, CEFA wants to provide local farmers with technical tools to enable them to face climate changes and improve agricultural production and the marketing potential of their products, so that they can earn from their agricultural activities may live in dignity.

2017

CEFA intervenes in Libya, core of the current migration phenomenon. A new project is launched supporting the social and health system of Sebha, the main hotspot of criminal activities related to human trafficking. The goal was to support 4 basic health centers.

2018

The attention is focused on the role of women in Africa. The projects want to fight gender inequalities and facilitate women's access to the labour market. In Italy CEFA starts the project "Facciamo tombola!" ("Bingo"), which analyzes the relationship between social exclusion and the rise of forms of xenophobia.

*CEFA declares to have respected the principle of not exceeding a ratio of 1:8 in its employees' pay levels, calculated on the basis of gross annual earnings.

OUR STAKEHOLDERS

CEFA recognizes the human person as a value and feels the obligation to protect not only the communities, but also all its stakeholders: members, funders, suppliers, employees, expatriate staff, local staff, national and international institutions with whom we collaborate, project partners, foundations, but also families supporting us, groups of volunteers, local communities and the community as a whole. The first engagement with our stakeholders is for CEFA to apply strict procedures to ensure the effective use of the resources we are entrusted. These funds are intended for the achievement of the goals pursued through international cooperation projects.

The witness

Carlo Costalli, president of the Christian Movement Workers (MCL - Movimento Cristiano Lavoratori), as a stakeholder, tells us why the Movement supports CEFA.

"Faith without works would be vain, but above all the poor cannot wait and everyone is called to do their part." Thus, President Carlo Costalli recalls MCL's commitment to support the initiatives that promote human rights' protection, people's dignity, access to food, work and energy. "We will particularly committed in supporting the right to work: supporting in this CEFA really contributes to give dignity to everyone. All of us must be placed in the condition to access the resources necessary to lead a worthy life, to be the creator of your own future in your own country.

A VOICE from Mozambique

Josefa Lourdes Felipe, beneficiary of the project and resident in the neighborhood of Munhava

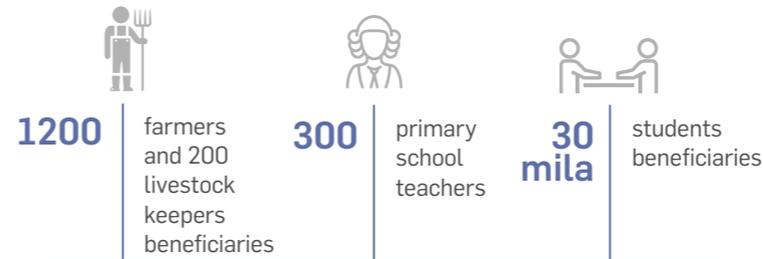

"Thanks to CEFA's intervention I was able to follow a food safety training course in the neighborhood where I live. I have two children of 3 and 5 years of age and I came into contact for the first time with the nutritionists of the project during a check up visit for my daughter, who had intestinal problems. On the first day of the training I received basic information on food hygiene and nutrition and I understood the importance of purifying water before drinking and storing dishes in a dry and clean place. I started a series of meetings with one of the experts, which allowed me to improve the hygienic conditions of my house. I realized that with little money I could modify my eating habits and improve cleanliness and therefore the quality of the environment in which I live. The first thing I did during the training was to create a drainer so to not keep the dishes on the floor and I'm currently building wood shelves for storing the food. I am persuading my husband to rehabilitate our latrine so that our children can live in a healthier and cleaner environment".

Africa Hand Project 1

The project aims to reduce poverty and improve health conditions of the vulnerable population. There are three areas of intervention: zotechnical, agricultural related to food security and nutritional education. In the livestock sector, the project promotes technical knowledge among livestock keepers so to help them increase and improve their milk production. In the agricultural sector we want to find sustainable solutions to increase the production of beans, corn, vegetables, irish potatoes and sweet potatoes, with the purpose of supporting our beneficiaries in both varying their diet and increasing their income. In the primary schools and rural communities the principles of a healthy and correct diet are being promoted. A specific training course was developed for 300 primary school teachers in order to raise awareness among 30,000 students. The project involves also the health centers where women go to check the nutritional status of their children. In these centers 5,000 women and children have been trained on food education. Through theoretical-practical lessons and home visits, the staff verifies beneficiaries' acquisition of new skills.

Sowing for Africa

The project aims to improve farmers' and beekeepers' skills in the district of Caia, in the province of Sofala, in order to increase sesame, honey and vegetable production. Farmers are followed from sowing to marketing of their produce, while beekeepers receive bee-keeping kits (gloves, overalls, etc.) and modern beehives that do not kill bees as was the case in the past when using traditional honey-harvesting techniques. Furthermore, to improve the living conditions of smallholders, associations have been consolidated and savings and credit practices have been promoted. In parallel, trainings on nutrition are being held and good hygiene practices are being promoted.

The environmental issue: the waste management system

Due to the absence or inadequacy of a waste management system, in 2017 CEFA intervened in Tanzania with projects in the environmental sector. In 2018 a handcraft workshop recycling plastic was launched in the village of Matembwe. The workshop involves 6 vulnerable women, who were first made aware on the environmental damages caused by a mismanagement of solid waste. The group was then trained in the production of various items made from recycled materials. The project aims to safeguard the environment and the health of rural communities in the district of Njombe, situated in the southern part of the country. Moreover, it aims to promote in the area the principals of the circular economy: the population is urged to reduce the amount of waste it generates while seeking sustainable methods for recycling it.

A VOICE from TANZANIA

Scholastica Matamwa, beneficiary of the handcraft workshop THAMANI

*"The CEFA seminar, held in the village where I live, has taught me that I must not throw away rubbish or burn it near home, because the smoke caused from plastic is harmful for both me and my children. I have understood that plastic has a value and that it can be used to produce items that can be sold. At the workshop I immediately felt welcomed by the group. I've had the chance to meet women who live my same difficulties. I have the opportunity to make myself useful for the entire community. The products we realize at the the THAMANI workshop are sold in Tanzania and abroad and parts of the proceeds are used to finance an awareness raising campaign focused on environment protection. The income I earn allow me to live a dignified life. My husband is disabled and since he cannot work, I'm the one bringing money at home. I can pay for his medical visits and I have also started raising small animals. The training made me more aware of the damage caused by man not only to the environment, but also to himself. I discovered that the waste I would have thrown before can instead be useful not only for me and the women I work with, but for all the inhabitants of the village. Everyone should know that the smoke generated from burning plastic is harmful. I hope that CEFA will continue its trainings in the villages and that our workshop can continue to recycle more waste for the benefit of more people."

In Dar es Salaam people with disabilities are relegated to the margins of society, as they are generally excluded from economic, political and social activities. In a context of poverty and lack of specialized healthcare structures, the project aims to improve people with disabilities' quality of life by adopting a community-based rehabilitation approach. There are three areas of intervention: medical rehabilitation, economic empowerment and social-educational inclusion. Specifically, CEFA is engaged in the implementation of vocational training courses followed by a period of apprenticeship in private companies. Trainees are in this way assisted in starting a career as cooks, cleaners, gardeners or beauticians. Moreover, the project foresees the realization of awareness raising campaigns focused on the issues of educational and work inclusion.

The project was realized in 8 villages in the Lupembe area, in the southwest of the country, with the aim to provide access to renewable, reliable and affordable energy to the local population. Electricity is produced by 2 hydroelectric power plants and is then distributed through a mini-grid composed by over 90 km of medium and low voltage lines. More than 1,200 users have been connected to the grid, including households, businesses and public service providers such as schools, health dispensaries and aqueducts. The project aims to further expand the distribution network in order to reach new villages and hamlets.

Improving the agricultural sector and providing opportunities for young people

The project aims to promote the training of disadvantaged young people and improve their living conditions by launching a series of income generating activities. In particular, we want to strengthen the professional and technical skills of young farmers in the District of Kilolo, to promote the sustainable development of the local agricultural sector and improve the level of food security. For this purpose the Dagaba Institute of Agriculture was equipped with new didactic equipment including a didactic/experimental plot, laboratories for veterinary and agronomic analysis, agricultural equipments and machineries. These actions allowed the organization of seminars on greenhouse farming, the correct use of chemical fertilizers, horticulture and small animal husbandry. Furthermore, we want to professionalize young artists of Dar es Salaam coming from vulnerable backgrounds so that they can earn a living from their talent. In this regard a capacity building program has been realized through participatory theater, music / art / clown therapy and management training.

Our rights

The persecution of people with albinism is a phenomenon affecting 25 African countries. In Tanzania the incidence of mutilations and killings of albinos is particularly high and represents one of the countries' main challenges with regard to the violation of human rights. These violent crimes are often the consequence of myths and superstitions. Ignorance and witchcraft contributed to the spread of beliefs according to which people with albinism have healing powers and possessing parts of their bodies can grant luck and success. The project aims to fight ignorance, discrimination and impunity by strengthening legal protection and raising civil society's awareness on the condition of people with albinism in Tanzania.

Overcoming malnutrition

The project intends to fight malnutrition and improve the living conditions of the inhabitants of the District of Kilolo. There are three intervention strategies: training and technical assistance to improve farming and animal husbandry practices, access to fertilizers and the provision of services such as storage and processing of agricultural products and raising awareness on the importance of a healthy and balanced diet. Through technical trainings we want to reduce post-harvest losses and increase food availability. To this regard the project supports the Kilolo Service Center for the storage and packaging of cereals. This was possible thanks to the support of Menù S.r.l. that enabled all the farmers in the area to access to the above-mentioned services.

Support to Kitui farmers and beekeepers

The project has improved the socio-economic conditions of the agro-pastoral communities of Kitui County. In a context of high drought risk, three intervention strategies were used: access to water, support to agriculture and beekeeping and the commercialization of honey, sorghum and mungo beans. 20 sand-filtering dams have been built for the storage of water, conservative farming techniques have been promoted to prevent soil damages and a microcredit system has been introduced. To increase the production of honey, beekeepers have been trained on modern beekeeping techniques through the use of "Langstroth" hives. For the commercialisation of honey, sorghum and mungo beans, producers are organised in groups headed by a marketing manager.

"I've always been working in livestock-keeping and agricultural activities, but before CEFA's training, business was not going well, as competition was getting stronger. Once trained, I acquired modern techniques in beekeeping and business management and I became head of the community organization that, supported by CEFA, is helping local beekeepers process their honey. Thanks to modern beekeeping techniques, which represent an alternative to the traditional method of setting fire under the trees hosting the beehives, which usually resulted in the death of the bees, communities have learned to overcome their fear of working with bees, allowing many of us, including women, to get involved in the production of this precious resource. I thank CEFA for allowing me to deepen my knowledge in the field of business management, which is essential for starting a small activity. I was able to increase my income and improve the living conditions of my family. I believe that cooperation should continue to focus on training in modern farming techniques to ensure a continuous increase in production."

Reforming the juvenile justice system

The project is addressed to boys and girls in conflict with the law in Kenya and wants to promote and protect their rights through a reform of the juvenile justice system. The pillars of our intervention are three: protection of children's rights in children statutory institutions, their reintegration in their communities and families of origin or in foster care, proposing alternative resolutions of disputes and the introduction and implementation of restorative justice. The alternative resolution of disputes foresees the intervention of an impartial, neutral and objective third party that encourages, assists and facilitates the resolution of the case. With restorative justice, instead, we want to promote reconciliation between parties and responsabilize those who offended rather than proceeding to their punishment and stigmatization.

Restoring justice

The project promotes structural reforms to guarantee the respect and promotion of human rights and to prevent abuses and violations within the criminal justice system in Kenya. The intent is to fill the gaps in the management and coordination activities of the local actors intervening in the field of human rights. These gaps limit the effectiveness and efficiency of monitoring mechanisms and the implementation of the United Nations programs and conventions against torture. A number of measures have been adopted to prevent different forms of maltreatment, remedy to the damages caused to the victims and counter the impunity of the responsables of violations through the creation of legal aid and health care networks. In addition, a national plan is foreseen to effectively implement the United Nations programs and conventions against torture and to strengthen the national security authorities in accordance with the Constitution of Kenya.

Improving agricultural production for the collective well-being

The project has improved the life conditions of the population of 100 villages in the area of Wolaita, a densely populated rural region in the South of the country, where agriculture is limited to subsistence. The project has consolidated the capabilities of the local agricultural extensionists and community leaders of the districts, who transmitted their knowledge and skills to 47,900 farmers. Along with the beneficiaries, project staff identified new agricultural practices meant to better adapt to climate change: low impact irrigation systems, revolving funds for small rural investments and experimental plots. The improvement of the agricultural production and yields has allowed farmers to access new economic resources, which have been fundamental to invest in health and education and to look at migration as a choice and not a necessity.

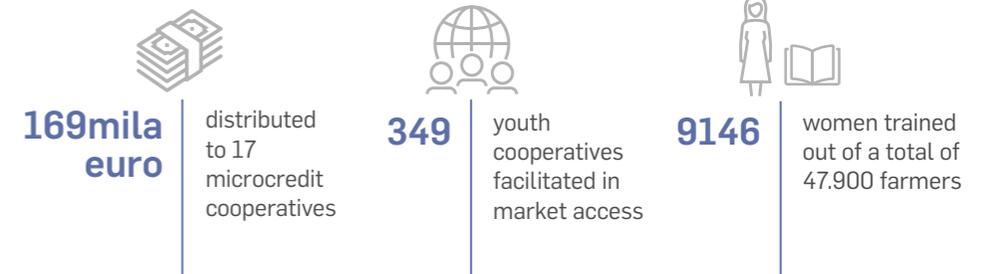

A VOICE from Ethiopia

Alemitu Mutie, 35 years, woman farmer

"I live in the village of Sere Esho. My name is Alemitu Mutie, I'm 35 old with 5 children. Before CEFA's training, here in the area of Wolaita, in southern Ethiopia, I cultivated the land of my family and with the harvest I was able to feed my loved ones, but nothing more. Thanks to the tools and to the training received from CEFA, I was able for the first time to sell my products at the market. I learned how to prepare the soil before sowing, the optimal spacing of seeds and plants so to use the land and the seeds in the most efficient way and, above all, I have learnt the importance of the rotation of crops, in order to exhaust the soil. Today, I bring most of the harvest to the market, so I can earn an income. I can buy what we are missing at home, like medicines, and I can send my children to school. Thanks to the training, together with a group of six families, we have started cultivating a common land, previously uncultivated. We were able to sow new crops, such as cabbage, from which we earned approximately 230 euros, a good sum for us farmers. I would have never wanted to leave my land, but I didn't know how to grow more and better. CEFA has helped me to achieve this desire and I am grateful to all the operators who supported me. Sometimes, however, this kind of training does not take into account the numerous commitments we have as women, always divided between home and work. These training experiences should be accessible to other women farmers in my area".

Inclusion of women and young people in rural areas — 2

The project responds to some of the country's greatest challenges: poverty, gender inequalities and the exodus towards urban areas, by creating opportunities for decent work and access to income for women and young people of the rural areas of Ethiopia. The three areas of intervention are East Tigray, West Oromia and Hadiya, areas with high poverty rates, social exclusion and high risk of unintended and illegal emigration. To counter gender inequality the project invests on 6 groups of agro-business women, willing to produce and to place high nutritional value foods on the local market.

The role of women for the good of all — 3

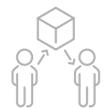

In Ethiopia CEFA intends to promote a process of self-development of rural communities for the collective well-being. The project aims to stimulate household-level economy in the Woreda District of Cheha with production and food processing activities and social protection. It focuses on the role of women through the identification of the real needs of three women's cooperatives. Based on an individual reinforcement plan, specific technical trainings are carried out on productive or processing aspects, on post-harvest treatments and on market access. Through training courses, addressed to teachers and local staff, awareness is raised on the importance of agricultural work, on gender equality, on food as a source of health and on respect for the environment.

Increasing income

A VOICE from Somalia

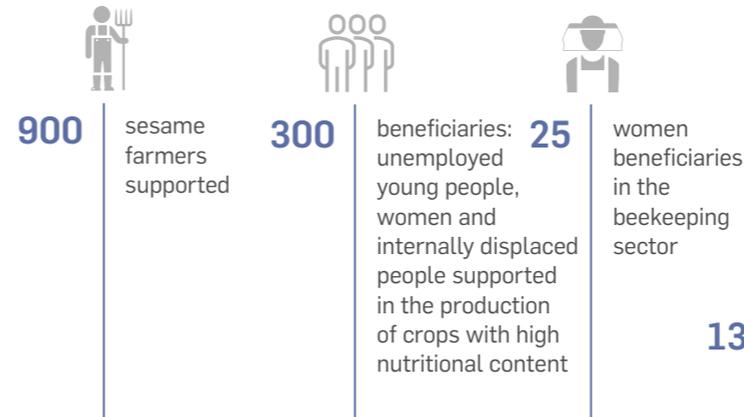

Osman Yusuf Ahmed,
agricoltore nel villaggio di Barey, distretto di Jowhar

"Thanks to CEFA's training, I had the chance to improve my knowledge in the field of agriculture and increase my income, allowing me to conduct a dignified life. We, farmers of the District of Jowhar, have learned irrigation and fertilization techniques with natural inputs, which allowed us to increase land productivity and use less water. With CEFA's support and thanks to the rehabilitation of water canals I had access to a secure source of water, which allowed me to increase the productivity of my family's land. Before this support I used to flood my fields during the rainy season; now, with the new irrigation techniques I've acquired, I am able to manage the resources and harvest higher yields. I hope that this project will continue, so that an increasing number of vulnerable people, struggling to survive, can improve their life conditions. International cooperation is fundamental for us, because it allows us to get assistance and training to prevent these precarious situations".

More sesame, more honey — 1

In Somalia, 4.4 million people live in conditions of misery and in need of humanitarian aid due to scarcity of food, water and medical care. Drought severely affects the agricultural production of rural communities. The project is implemented in the District of Jowhar, in the Middle Shabelle Region, with the aim of promoting economic development within the agricultural sector to improve the level of food security among rural communities. The rehabilitation of irrigation canals is planned to improve water access and increase agricultural production. In particular, the project intervenes in the value chain of sesame, a climate resistant crop very adapt for the area, which is characterized by both droughts and floods. Moreover, it supports the production of vegetables with high nutritional content, with the intent of diversifying rural communities' sources of income. have of Modern beekeeping practices have been introduced to increase income opportunities and ensure safety against the risks of related to traditional beekeeping techniques.

To increase the income — 2

In the Lower Shabelle Region, in south-central Somalia, climate change in recent years has deeply affected agricultural production, compromising farmers' lives. The project has 4 components: peaceful conflict prevention and resolution, rehabilitation of water infrastructures, construction of alternative water sources and increase of agricultural productivity. Water infrastructures are intended to facilitate irrigation using the main water sources present in the area: the Primo Secondary Canal and the Shabelle River. This leads to the establishment of a sustainable irrigation system meant to ensure that farmers in the region can access water and improve their harvests. In order to increase productivity, the diversification of crops and the use of modern agronomic techniques is promoted so to increase income and improve beneficiaries' living conditions.

A VOICE from Libia

Reem Hussin,
Nurse at the medical centre of Abd Elkafi

"Project activities had a pivotal role in supporting the most vulnerable groups among the population of Sebha, especially elders and children. The conflict has made it almost impossible for us - doctors and nurses - to carry out our work and offer basic medical services to the population. Health centres' capacity to provide support and care have been considerably enhanced and, as a result, a higher number of people could benefit from the distribution of medicines. In particular, we could get medical material, which was scarce or absent after the revolution, to treat chronic diseases such as diabetes and problems related to blood pressure. This training has been really useful for me, not only because I have deepened my professional knowledge, but mostly because, taking an active part in the distribution of medical supplies and psycho-social support, I consolidated my the relationships with my colleagues and the medical staff from other centers. I think it is fundamental to encourage collaboration between the different institutes and hospitals, because it can make our work much more effective. Training in local hospitals and medical specialization should be further supported and an emergency medical team should be created to better react to the precarious situation caused by the conflict and the frequent crises .

Improvement of Sebha's social and health services 1

The city of Sebha is one of the most populated and among the most insecure and unstable in Libya. Not only the ethnic and tribal divisions create a climate of tension, but the city is also one of the main hotspots of criminal activities related to human trafficking and smuggling of weapons, drugs, stolen cars and fuel. Out of a population of more than 250 thousand inhabitants about 20 thousand people do not have access to medicines and basic medical care. By intervening in this context, the project supports 4 health centers to primarily respond to the needs of the most marginalised people and to ensure equal access to health services. In addition to providing drugs and training to medical staff, the project aims to disseminate good prevention practices at local level.

For the respect of human rights 2

In detention centres in Libya, sub-Saharan migrants are victims of inhumane and degrading treatments that go against the respect of human rights. The project has improved the life conditions of the migrants held in the centre of Tarek al Matar and supported the maternal and child health services of the Tripoli Medical Hospital Center. These detention centres lack food and medicines and the hygienic situation is serious. Migrants are often not registered and the asylum seekers are not reported by the operators. Through the project an intervention of very first emergency has been implemented: basic goods have been distributed, sanitary facilities were rehabilitated and local operators were educated in respecting human rights. Following the visits to the center of Tarek al Matar, it was possible to identify the real needs of migrants, depending also on their psychological profile. In addition, a venue has been realized for recreational activities for mothers and children. The improvement of the maternal and child health services of the Tripoli Medical Center hospital enabled the entire Libyan community to gain great benefits.

Gabès against pollution

Gabès, a coastal oasis praised by Pliny the Elder and Leo the African, with its boundless palm groves going from the Mediterranean coast to the harshness of the Tunisian rocky desert, is today a reality seriously compromised by an environmental and social crisis. The latter is linked to the pollution caused by the phosphate chemical industry, which has undermined the development of tourism in the homonymous gulf. In this context, CEFA carried out two projects for the consolidation of civil society and the collaboration between institutions, companies and representatives of local organizations for the protection of the territory. From 2016 to 2018, 32 associations benefited from a training cycle of over 30 days - on environmental communication and awareness, strategies of mobilization, advocacy and project management - and constant support from 10 experts. 21 out of 32 of these associations have also received important funding for the creation of micro-projects with a social and environmental impact. At the same time, CEFA financed a research on water management which led to the production of the documentary entitled «Tout va bien Lella ?!» on the consequences of the discharges released from the chemical industry in the Gulf. The two projects have also allowed the creation of the water governance platform in Gabès, a regional body that plays a mediating role between the claims of the population and the decisions taken by the authorities on the management of water resources.

Tackling unemployment and social exclusion

The Tunisian revolution of 2011 has led to great successes in terms of democratic transition, but did not produce the desired economic and social transformation. Social exclusion, marginalization and lack of cultural and working opportunities are conditions that severely affect young people in Tunisia and are closely linked to the phenomenon of radicalism. The project intervenes in the areas of the governorates of Bizerte, Jendouba, Manouba, Kairouan and Medenine, mostly affected by unemployment and social exclusion, and involves local associations, Tunisian and Italian institutions and universities. Consultation tables are organized for the analysis of the labour market and the study of objective factors that contribute to the diffusion of violent extremism. Discussions on the role of public institutions and civil society organisations were also held in order to prevent and counter radicalism.

Dialogue between local authorities and civil society organisations 5

With the Jasmine Revolution, the country has taken on a long process of democratization of the institutions, culminating with the promulgation of the new Constitution in 2014. In order to support political decentralisation, the project has improved the competences of the municipal authorities and allowed a greater involvement of the civil society in decision-making processes. Collaboration between local authorities and civil society organisations has been consolidated for implementing municipal policies. There were 3 areas of intervention: Tabarka, Ain Draham and Beni Mtir, located in the Governorate of Jendouba, a region in North-west Tunisia. The training was addressed to 30 officials of the municipalities and to the members of 27 associations following two need assessments, the functioning and the organisation of the three municipalities and the local associations. In order to improve the dialogue between the authorities and local groups, quarterly meetings were held for proposing concrete solutions to the main issues concerning the three municipalities. The latter were assisted in the implementation of the 2017 Annual Investment Plans (PAI) for realizing proximity projects under an agreement between authorities and citizens.

The groups involved presented a project idea concerning basic services. After an evaluation of the project proposals, five micro-projects were selected and funded.

Support for returning migrants 4

The aim of the project is to strengthen the capacities of local authorities and civil society to support at social and economic level the Tunisians returning to their country. CEFA coordinated public services and civil society to support 22 people (17 returning migrants and 5 persons who had never left their homeland). Through an inquiry, the real needs of those who had returned were identified, at both economic and social level, and then round tables, spaces for exchange, reflection and discussion were organized for coordinating the creation of micro-enterprises.

Batoul Jdid,
social worker in Oujda

"Thanks to the project, we social workers and teachers, have participated to a training programme that enabled us to strengthen our personal and professional skills. We improved our capacity to relate with boys and girls between the ages of 15 and 21, who are those that more than others are prone to the risk of radicalisation. The training allowed us to highlight the issue of radicalism within school institutions, where the training courses were focused primarily on fighting drugs, poverty and environmental protection. The adoption of the manual "Educational path for prevention of radicalization" enabled to organise a cycle of different workshops of drawing, painting and theatre to discuss personal development, human rights and active citizenship. These activities, that saw the participation also of young sub-Saharan migrants and Syrians, have strengthened their capabilities to organize their individual and collective work: it has been an experience for promoting the values of tolerance, cohabitation and acceptance of diversity. Young people have positively changed their behaviour and attitudes towards their teachers and classmates and have transmitted the knowledge acquired to those who had not participated in the activities. Given the positive results, new workshops will be realized to involve a higher number of young people on this educational path."

Integration against radicalism

In recent years, the number of Moroccan migrants returning to their country has increased due to the European economic crisis. They are young people between 15 and 29 years of age, a category which is extremely at risk of economic and social exclusion. In this context, the project aims to reduce the exclusion of Moroccan and sub-Saharan migrants and young people and women, the most vulnerable part of Moroccan society. The action is developed on three main components: training and awareness raising, implementation of micro-projects and creation of cooperatives. Local educators were provided with tools to raise beneficiaries' awareness on issues such as the prevention of radicalism, socio-cultural integration, digital communication, intercultural entertainment and conflict management. For the benefit of local associations, social micro-projects on tolerance and respect for human rights were financed. To combat exclusion, 30 cooperatives are planned to be created for the benefit of vulnerable social groups, i.e. migrants, young people and women.

In November 2018, in collaboration with the association YaBasta Padova Caminantes, CEFA has realized the intercultural project "Drawing the Future" providing for an exchange which took place in Rabat, Morocco, from 10th to 15th November 2018. 12 Moroccan, sub-Saharan and Italian youth aged between 18 and 30 have participated sharing reflections and feelings on migration through the language of comics. The workshop was led by Calia and Bon. Calia, after telling the birth and development of comics as a medium for social communication, provided the participants with basic techniques for creating their personal stories. Bon created moments of group animation. At the end of the week 12 comic book stories were created and the content was used for an e-book publication and 4 exhibitions in Italy (Mogliano Veneto, Padua and Bologna) and in Morocco in Rabat.

Training and jobs 3

If in the past Morocco was a land of emigration and a country of transit for migrants coming from sub-Saharan countries, today it has also become a country of destination. The project focus on social inclusion and professional integration of the most vulnerable migrants and refugees, particularly women and unaccompanied minors, who lack the professional skills required to access the labour market. Moreover, discrimination, violence and language barrier complicate this access, so CEFA intervened to strengthen the public and private organizations and institutions responsible for vocational training and job integration of the migrants. In particular, CEFA collaborates with the Entraide Nationale (the federating body for social assistance in Morocco), IOM (International Organization for Migration), ODA (Alianza por la Solidaridad) and UNHCR (United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees).

Assisted voluntary return: a new outlook 4

The project has supported Moroccan, Tunisian, Albanian and Senegalese migrants willing to return to their countries of origin with a new life perspective. Vocational training, combined with social, psychological and technical support has been offered to migrants in difficulty living in Italy. 46 beneficiaries were reintegrated, mostly young Moroccans, with an average age of 36 years and in possession of a middle school diploma. Family reunion and dissatisfaction at professional level were among the main reasons of return. In Italy, the project involved interventions of mediation, training and counselling. For migrants willing to start, micro-enterprise interviews with social workers were carried out to help draw up a business plan with related marketing strategies. The beneficiaries have therefore successfully undertaken entrepreneurial activities in trade, agriculture and animal husbandry. Those who chose to work as an employee received a skilled profile and assistance in drafting CVs. In this way everyone had a chance to start a dignified life in their country of origin.

Later, 30 of these have decided to form the Civil Committee for the Defence of Women's Rights. This latter became a promoter of information and awareness-raising activities on gender-based violence in the most isolated towns and villages of the region. In particular, the Committee raised awareness among 1600 vulnerable women on the competent public authorities. Thanks to the dialogue with local institutions, the above-mentioned Committee draw up a manual explaining the bureaucratic procedure for filing a complaint. A VOICE from Ecuador

Rosendo Pizarro,
38 years, president of the association APROCEL

"CEFA immediately understood the challenges afflicting us, the Ecuadorian farmers, and supported us in the development of a better organised and sustainable work, providing us with machinery and technical tools. This support has been fundamental for the improvement of the organizational and the productive aspects of our association. The workshops, seminars and training courses offered by CEFA through the technicians of the Ministry of Agriculture allowed us to develop skills and professionalism, making us more autonomous in all phases of agricultural production: from grafting to post-harvesting, from the use of drying machines to those for roasting. Associations and workers in Ecuador must be involved and helped to acquire more and better awareness of themselves, of their own work and the environment in which they live, because, as an old wise man once said: "Solo se hace un buen trabajo cuando se juntan las manos y las organizaciones (good work can be done only when hands and organizations meet)".

New Markets for cacao, coffee and quinoa

After the intervention on the cocoa and coffee value chains in the provinces of Sucumbios and Orellana, CEFA has extended its action to the quinoa value chain in the Chimborazo area, offering support to small entrepreneurs of coffee, cocoa and quinoa for the improvement of their productive, organizational and commercial capacities. In addition to researching new agricultural strategies, in order to contrast the negative effects of climate change, the project wants to strengthen the internal market through promotional campaigns and the organization of events, with the aim of guaranteeing access to new foreign markets for the commercialization of the products of the three value chains.

Good practices to improve agriculture

The project involves the rural areas of Ecuador characterized by widespread poverty and low literacy, where agriculture is the main source of income. CEFA wants to strengthen the productive, organizational and commercial capacities of small producers through training and dissemination of good agro-ecological practices to improve access to more profitable markets for the direct sale of coffee, cocoa and quinoa. Moreover, to increase productivity in agriculture, we want to support and promote inclusive and participatory value chain models, attentive to the economic sustainability of small producers, to food security and able to contrast the negative effects of climate change.

Women, rights and the fight against gender discrimination

CEFA has been operating for 17 years in Guatemala, a Central American country characterized by widespread poverty and gender inequality and which, since the end of the civil war in 1996, has been going through a difficult process of democratization. The project, realized in the Department of Quiché, improves life conditions of Mayan families of 15 rural communities. Through a scholarship programme the action ensured education for girls who were then called to raise awareness among families on organic farming and food security. In particular, CEFA has supported women in the process of becoming aware of their rights, making them protagonists of change. Through training and education the aim has been to combat social and economic gender discrimination, in order to secure a better future for young Mayan girls.

A VOICE from Guatemala

Luisa Romualda Acevedo Mejía,
23 years, animator of the Barbara Ford Association

"The training and financial support I have received from CEFA over the last fourteen years has allowed me to attend university, a possibility that in the rural communities of Guatemala is not taken for granted, and I finally became a primary school teacher. Thanks to the trainings I deepened issues that are very important, such as self-esteem, reproductive health, human rights, gender equality, the violence against women. I received the necessary tools to organize seminars with girls and mothers during which we discussed on the rational use of resources for the protection of the environment. Moreover,

I have participated in training courses in Honduras, which have allowed me to increase my self-esteem and confidence. I believe that education is essential for the women of Guatemala, as it allows them to find a job, both locally and abroad. International cooperation must continue to work on human rights and with the indigenous people, the most vulnerable, for example through the promotion of forms of entrepreneurship".

Bingo 1

The project, led by CEFA, intends to counteract the spreading of forms of discrimination, xenophobia and racism and investigates the relationship between the emergence of hate speeches and the dynamics of social exclusion. Four Italian cities are involved: Bologna, Verona, Naples and Palermo, where activities based on three components are taking place in parallel: a research carried out by the University of Bologna, investigating the phenomenon with interviews, focus groups and questionnaires to 100 experts in the sector and more than 4.000 students from schools of the 4 cities; specialized trainings for social workers and teachers on intervention methodologies in multicultural contexts and workshops for students to stimulate critical thinking on the issues of migration and multiculturalism. In the four territories events are planned on education for inclusion and global citizenship, such as theatre performances, World Cafe and Bingo – a show realized with Patrizio Roversi.

Between the Via Emilia and the South 2

The project takes place in the three municipalities of Valsamoggia, Spilamberto and Savignano sul Panaro in the provinces of Modena and Bologna. The aim is to provide tools for the creation of inclusive storytelling on the theme of multiculturalism and counteract the emergence of intolerance, racism and xenophobia. Photography, art and film workshops were held with returns of experience that will take place on the territory through moments of sharing with the local community. From the ideas born within the screenwriting workshops and creative writing activities the fiction "War in Cuba" will be produced, which deals with the issue of social inclusion and the differences in the three territories involved in the project.

E+ KA1 B.I.T.E. 3

The BITE project is part of the European program Erasmus Plus and involved 21 young people from 7 countries: Italy, Greece, Serbia, Albania, Macedonia, Morocco and Tunisia. The project stemmed from the need to develop new approaches and new strategies of integration through the development of soft skills and the use of non-formal education techniques. Social entrepreneurship skills have been provided to the young people involved, which should go to the benefit of the local communities, in particular to the most vulnerable groups at risk of social exclusion.

Beyond Theatre 4

The project consist of artistic and multidisciplinary workshops addressed to European and foreign citizens (refugees, asylum seekers and economic migrants) in three cities: Warsaw, Bologna and Antwerp. The aim is to create a space in which people with different skills receive training and share their knowledges for the creation of art and shows. At the end of the workshops interactive performances related to hospitality were realized.

SPONSORSHIP PROGRAM

Through its Sponsorship Program CEFA guarantees to children, both boys and girls, the opportunity to go to school and learn. Also women of Mozambique have become beneficiaries of the sponsorship program and have become excellent livestock keepers. The support is addressed to families and communities to which these children and women belong to, as still today, the community plays a major role in the development of both individuals and territories.

MOZAMBIQUE

Les Escolinhas

In collaboration with CAM (Consortium Associations of Mozambique), CEFA supports the children of an escolinhas (centre for the pre-school activity) in the District of Caia. The objective is to support poor children or orphans in their pre-school learning phase: activities to reinforce language and basic maths are carried out, also refining ocular-manual skills. As they go to school children eat a daily balanced meal. They also participate in community celebrations and are protagonists for a day with theatre, songs and dances.

Women farmers

Mozambique is among the poorest countries in the world with 44% of its infant population presenting some form of malnutrition. Milk represents an important integration to children's diet, so as a source of income for women farmers and their families. The project "Adopt a Woman Farmer" supports women in improving their livestock-keeping capacities and in marketing their increased production of milk. The sponsorship programme offered also the opportunity to take part to trainings on proper child nutrition and hygienic practices.

Right to study

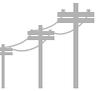

In the Quiché region, in Guatemala, girls are mostly employed in domestic works and often forced into marriage by the age of 14. The Sponsorship programme intends to tackle this phenomenon and ensure that girls can have the chance to attend school and choose their own future. In the morning they have school activities such as reading, writing and logical mathematical learning; in the afternoon, awareness activities, female empowerment and personal hygiene. Moreover, participatory theatre is a powerful tool through which they can analyse their fears and visualize their future.

TANZANIA

Light a smile

CEFA has built two hydro powerplants in the villages of Ikondo and Matembwe. The sponsorship program helps families connect their houses to the mini-grid: granting lighting, allowing children to study at home, mothers to use electrical appliances. The whole community benefits from it: commercial activities (bakery, tailoring) and small workshops (carpentry, milling machines) have opened and the health dispensary, thanks to electricity, is finally equipped with a refrigerator for storing drugs and vaccines.

FROM A WOMAN FARMER TO A MOTHER FROM MOZAMBIQUE

Within the framework of the Africa Hand Project that aims to ensure access to food for all, 2018 witnessed the launch of the campaign entitled "Adopt a woman farmer from Mozambique". An initiative that has supported 200 women in becoming livestock keepers in the area of Beira. Milk represents an important integration to children's diet and increases households' income. Now that all the livestock keepers have been supported, we've gone further. Our current goal is to support 1,000 mothers and overcome the risk of malnutrition for their children. In Nhamatanda, in the rural area of Beira, poverty is widespread as agriculture activities are not profitable and the population is even more in difficulty due to the recent passage of two cyclones, which have destroyed houses and flooded thousands of acres of land. Every 100 children, 50 never eat proteins, and the rest eat them less than once a day. We need to encourage the consumption of milk, yoghurt and legumes to free everyone from malnutrition and other diseases such as diabetes and hypertension. These mothers need potato seeds, corn, beans and farming tools such as hoes, spades, as well as pots for cooking and valorising what they collect for their children's diet.

Albertina Ramin, 28 years old, is married to Jose and has seven children. She can't read nor write and wishes to have a better life for her children. She cultivates millet and produces vegetables with which she feeds her family, while the rest is sold at the market to buy more food and for paying her children's school fees.. Albertina has a dream: to have a brick house, to send her children to school and to grow them in a healthy way. She dreams about electricity, to get a refrigerator and a stove so she can cook at home.

MEDIA E WEB

CEFA wants to make people and the media aware of its work. To make ourselves known means also to help people to carry out a choice, for example allocating the 5x1000 to those who do not our same opportunities and to attract sponsors for social projects to be implemented in the short and long term. In 2018 we used both offline and online tools. The magazine "The CEFA Newspaper", published on a quarterly basis, in 2018 adopted new, more attractive, graphic outlook. It talks about the projects CEFA realizes and updates donors, volunteers, aid workers and friends. Moreover, CEFA renewed its logo. The online tools are instead the responsive site, i.e. visible also through smartphone, but there are also our news via email, sent to people with whom a relationship has been established, in addition to the advertising of our events on radio, TV, press and web.

CEFA's presence on social media also wants to intercept and bring closer potential supporters, to motivate and transform acquaintances and volunteers into "ambassadors" of our campaigns. CEFA is present on Facebook, Instagram, Youtube and Twitter as "CEFA Onlus". Here we tell you about our projects in Italy and abroad and update you on the people involved in fundraising campaigns. On FB other pages have been created in the national languages of the countries where our projects are carried out, in order to better communicate with locals.

Reinterpreting the greats men of history to renew ourselves

An organization must always be ready to renew itself and look for new languages to grab the attention of its audience. As from 2011 we organized a Food Day, we are currently trying to make our brand dialogue with the memory of great characters that have marked the development of mankind. In 2018 the centenary of Nelson Mandela's birth was celebrated. On July 18, 2018, Bologna also celebrated the centenary of Nelson Mandela's birth and we have done it with events at the University, where we were able to encounter so many young people. Approaching the figure of the South African Nobel prize to the activities CEFA promotes, seemed natural to us considering the central importance that Mandela accorded to Man. As our founder Bersani always pointed out, our activity must be centred on men, allowing them to become the protagonist of their own development, to be an actor of democracy and peace.

2019 is the year of another prominent character: 500 years from the death of Leonardo da Vinci, promoter of a knowledge at the service of development and the well-being of all. We wish Leonardo's humanism was ideally reflected in our actions, that men are always the beneficiary of training, innovation, transmission of knowledge, with respect for local cultures both in Africa, Latin America and the rest of the world, so that they can live a new and durable well-being. We will celebrate Leonardo in our own way, with a performance of urban and supportive Pixel Art. This year we will also be in Rome. We will start from Milan in Piazza Duomo on 5th October, in Rome in Piazza del Popolo on 12th October and in Bologna in Piazza Maggiore on 19th October 2019.

We are waiting for you!

Small action, great solidarity

For Easter and Christmas our volunteers are committed to propose to the public solidarity products (Easter eggs, colombe, panettoni and pandori) to help and make African women autonomous!

EASTER: YOU GET THE EGG, SHE GETS A HEN!

By choosing a CEFA easter egg or colomba, a chicken was donated to a woman in Kilolo in Tanzania! One of the beneficiaries is Consolata who received three hens, sold the eggs and reinvested the earnings. Today she has 72 hens and has become a point of reference for the entire village: African women reinvest up to 90% of what they gain in health and education and create a virtuous circle of development!

CHRISTMAS: AN APPETIZING PANETTONE AND PANDORO

Each Christmas cake has supported a woman farmer in Mozambique giving them all the means to become a beekeeper: hive, suit, honey extractor to produce honey, trainings, contacts with markets to sell the product and increase their income. The solidarity products have been packaged in coloured African fabrics to be used as placemats for breakfast or as bags, hand-stitched by the mothers of Tanzania who can thus make a living for their family.

CEFA's volunteers involved numerous parishes, participated at FICO Eatly World, moved their network in Bologna, Modena, Milano, Faenza, Chiaravalle, by telling how this gesture can become a concrete opportunity of solidarity.

Civil service: understanding the world and oneself

Marco Benassi >> CEFA's Responsible for Civil Service

Through the Federation FOCSIV, CEFA joined the Civil Service giving young people a concrete opportunity for training and work, which CEFA offers since it was born in 1972. The areas of intervention are human rights protection, services to the person and education for peace among people, both in Italy (with projects of Global Citizenship Education - based in Bologna) and abroad.

In 2018, 20 young people took part in this cooperation programme and had the chance to understand if this could become a full-time profession. Several have continued with us and started working with CEFA's projects; others have taken other paths aware of what they gained through this amazing experience.

Sanda has a beautiful story that can inspire many young people. She joined the Civil Service in Morocco with CEFA and won the Volunteer of the Year Award. She is 26 years old and speaks English, French and Italian. She developed a very strong connection with Africa, where she spent her childhood. Being a sociologist of migrations, she coordinated for CEFA a project for the inclusion of vulnerable people, among which sub-Saharan migrants.

"With this award, I was given the honor of representing all the young people committed with passion and professionalism in Italy or abroad in contributing to collective development. People working in this field are not idealists, but know that a positive change can be activated with the right energy. Thanks to CEFA, which works with people and not for people, I understood the life journey of many men and women. We often use the term "migrant" to define those who migrate from the South to the North driven by war, poverty, but when we are abroad, we are also migrants. After all, migrating is an experience affecting the identity of those who live it, but it does not define a person in its complexity".
